AMDA comes to NC Plan Ahead for March 5-8, 2009

That is when the AMDA Annual Symposium will be held in Charlotte, NC. It is a thrill to be the host state for this outstanding symposium that always provides ample high quality continuing medical education (CME). For the meeting to be a complete success we are hoping that every medical director and every nursing facility in North Carolina will plan to participate. Certified medical directors can use CME credits from this meeting to attain the necessary credits for certification renewal. Medical directors should encourage all physicians who care for long-term care patients to attend this outstanding meeting even if they are not medical directors. There is so much for any physician, nurse practitioner or physician assistant who participates in the long-term care continuum to learn and this is the place to get the best information on federal/state regulations, the survey process, medical updates, ethics, quality improvement, end of life care and many more long-term care focused topics. Bring your Administrator and Director of Nursing. The meeting also provides continuing education credits for nursing home administrators, nurses, and pharmacists. There will also be opportunity at this time next year to submit proposals for the program. If you have a particularly excellent quality improvement program or uniquely effective aspect of care you may want to submit and program proposal or poster. Details can be found at the AMDA website (amda.com). North Carolina has much to showcase regarding innovation and excellence in care. As usual North Carolina and South Carolina will hold a state meeting on Friday night which will be a time to network with colleagues and plan our state chapter events for the year. Please plan now to attend!
